I was driving one day when I noticed a car behind me flashing its lights repeatedly. Alarmed, I pulled over, and the other vehicle stopped behind me. Thinking there must be something wrong with my car, I was shocked when an old Army buddy I hadn't seen in 20 years stepped up and shook my hand. We reminisced for a while and then, just before we parted company, I asked him how he knew it was me driving ahead of him. "I marched behind you for years," he said. "I'd recognize the back of your head anywhere!"

Military Humor At Fort Riley, Kan., the soldiers' wives were asked to bake treats for a party. My brownies did not turn out well, and I told my husband I would be embarrassed if no one ate them. As a group of soldiers filed in, however, I noticed they bypassed other goodies in favor of min. I was flattered until I heard one soldier ask my husband, "Hey, Sarge, are these the brownies you told us we better ear, or else?"

VICE PRESIDENT'S CORNER- HARRY E. (GENE) REED

Well, we have started a new year. I choose to believe that all the craziness will go away this year and we can get back living not hiding. Somehow some way we all need to get together so we can toast ourselves and remember when. I really missed not having the reunion last year, but Engineers have and always will keep moving forward and deal with what is thrown at us. At least until our wives tell otherwise. I will as always keep you my brothers and your families in prayers. Until we meet again keep moving and looking forward.

A FEW CHUCKLES FOR THE DAY

A military base commander called to complain that the weather – forecasting software our company created for them kept reporting unexplainable wind shifts. "Do you know where the sensor is located?" my coworker asked. "Of course," he responded. "I is where we park the helicopters." My high school assignment was to ask a veteran about World War II. Since my father had served in the Philippines during the war, I chose him. After a few basic questions, I very gingerly asked, "Did you ever kill anyone?" Dad got quiet. Then, in a soft voice, he said, "Probably. I was the cook."

Last Known Widow Of Civil War Veteran Dies At 101

Helen Viola Jackson's 1936 marriage to James Bolin was unusual to say the least: He was 93 and in declining health, and she was a 17-year-old schoolgirl.

Bolin was also a Civil War veteran who fought for the Union in the border state of Missouri. Jackson was almost certainly the last remaining widow of a Civil War soldier when she died December 16, 2020 at a nursing home in Marshfield, Missouri. She was 101.

Several Civil War heritage organizations have recognized Jackson's quiet role in history, one that she hid for all but the final three years of her life, said Nicholas Inman, her pastor and longtime friend. Yet in those final years, Inman said, Jackson embraced the recognition that included a spot on the Missouri Walk of Fame and countless cards and letters from well-wishers.

"It was sort of a healing process for Helen: that something she thought would be kind of a scarlet letter would be celebrated in her later years," Inman said.

Jackson grew up one of 10 children in the tiny southwestern Missouri town of Niangua, near Marshfield. Bolin, a widower who had served as a private in the 14th Missouri Cavalry during the Civil War seven decades earlier, lived nearby.

Jackson's father volunteered his teenage daughter to stop by Bolin's home each day to provide care and help with chores. To pay back her kindness, Bolin offered to marry Jackson, which would allow her to receive his soldier's pension after his death, a compelling offer in the context of the Great Depression.

Jackson agreed in large part because "she felt her daily care was prolonging his life," Inman said.

They wed on Sept. 4, 1936, at his home. Throughout their three years of marriage there was no intimacy and she never lived with him. She never told her parents, her siblings or anyone else about the wedding. She never remarried, spending decades "harboring this secret that had to be eating her alive," Inman said.

After Bolin's death in 1939, she did not seek his pension.

She also realized the stigma and potential scandal of a teenager wedding a man in his 90s, regardless of her reason. In an oral history recording in 2018, Jackson said she never spoke of the wedding to protect Bolin's reputation as well as her own.

"I had great respect for Mr. Bolin, and I did not want him to be hurt by the scorn of wagging tongues," she said.

Inman and Jackson were longtime friends. She was a charter member of the Methodist church where he serves as pastor. One day in December 2017, she told Inman about her secret marriage to a much older man. She mentioned in passing that he fought in the Civil War.

"I said, 'What? Back up about that. What do you mean he was in the Civil War?" Inman said.

Inman checked into her story and found that everything she told him was "spot on." Officials at Wilson's Creek National Battlefield sent him copies of Bolin's service information. She identified where he was buried, in Niangua.

She also kept a Bible that he gave her — in which he wrote about their marriage. Those written words were good enough for the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War and other heritage organizations to recognize Jackson's place in history.

After a lifetime of avoiding her past, Jackson embraced it in her final years, Inman said. She spoke to schoolchildren and had a Facebook page dedicated to her. She enjoyed getting cards and letters.

She also found new peace. A stoic nature that kept her from shedding tears at her own siblings' funerals seemed to evaporate.

After Bolin's relatives found out about Jackson's role in his life, they went to the nursing home and presented her with a framed photo of him.

"She broke down and cried," Inman recalled. "She kept touching the frame and said, 'This is the only man who ever loved me."

An interesting article I ran across the other day

Bomb squad disposes of live Civil War cannonball found in Maryland

By MARY GRACE KELLER | The Frederick News-Post, Md. | Published: March 23, 2021

FREDERICK, Md. (Tribune News Service) — A bomb squad on Monday safely disposed of an unexploded Civil War-era cannonball a Jefferson resident received from a relative who recently found it near the Monocacy Battlefield, according to fire officials.

A team of bomb technicians from the Office of the State Fire Marshal disposed of the cannonball at Beaver Creek Quarry in Hagerstown, according to the fire marshal's office.

"The unexploded military ordnance was determined to be a live cannonball round used during the Civil War. Bomb technicians conducted diagnostics and determined the fusing mechanism was still intact," a statement reads.

The cannonball came into the possession of a homeowner on Glen Hill Court in Jefferson, who contacted the Office of the State Fire Marshal after another relative said the cannonball could be live. Bomb technicians took it to the quarry and determined the best decision was to conduct an "emergency disposal," per fire officials.

The fire marshal's office warned that these military devices pose the same threat today as they did 150-some years ago.

First U.S. fatality in the Korean War

(the following is from https://www.history.com/this-day-in-history/first-u-s-fatality-in-the-korean-war)

1950 July 05

Near Sojong, South Korea, Private Kenneth Shadrick, a 19-year-old infantryman from Skin Fork, West Virginia, becomes the first American reported killed in the Korean War. Shadrick, a member of a bazooka squad, had just fired the weapon at a Soviet-made tank when he looked up to check his aim and was cut down by enemy machine-gun fire.

Near the end of World War II, the "Big Three" Allied powers-the United States, the Soviet Union, and Great Britain-agreed to divide Korea into two separate occupation zones and temporarily govern the nation. The country was split along the 38th parallel, with Soviet forces occupying the northern zone and Americans stationed in the south. By 1949, separate Korean governments had been established, and both the United States and the USSR withdrew the majority of their troops from the Korean Peninsula. The 38th parallel was heavily fortified on both sides, but the South Koreans were unprepared for the hordes of North Korean troops and Soviet-made tanks that suddenly rolled across the border on June 25, 1950.

Two days later, President Harry Truman announced that the United States would intervene in the Korean conflict to stem the spread of communism, and on June 28 the United Nations approved the use of force against communist North Korea. In the opening months of the war, the U.S.-led U.N. forces rapidly advanced against the North Koreans, but in October, Chinese communist troops entered the fray, throwing the Allies into a hasty retreat. By May 1951, the communists were pushed back to the 38th parallel, where the battle line remained for the rest of the war.

In 1953, an armistice was signed, ending the fighting and reestablishing the 1945 division of Korea that still exists today. Approximately 150,000 troops from South Korea, the United States, and participating U.N. nations were killed in the Korean War, and as many as one million South Korean civilians perished. An estimated 800,000 communist soldiers were killed, and more than 200,000 North Korean civilians died.

The original figure of American troops lost–54,246 killed–became controversial when the Pentagon acknowledged in 2000 that all U.S. troops killed around the world during the period of the Korean War were incorporated into that number. For example, any American soldier killed in a car accident anywhere in the world from June 1950 to July 1953 was considered a casualty of the Korean War. If these deaths are subtracted from the 54,246 total, leaving just the Americans who died (from whatever cause) in the Korean theater of operations, the total U.S. dead in the Korean War numbers 36,516.

7TH INFANTRY DIVISION ASSOCIATION CLOSING DOWN 7-1-2021

I am also a member of the 7th Infantry Division Association and received news that they have decided that the time has com to "case their colors" and close the Association at the end of June 2021. The reason is that their membership numbers and income flow are not capable of sustaining the Association.

Story from member Raymond E. Spiess "B" Co. 1-1975 to 3-1977 How I ended up with going to Ft. Leonard Wood for Combat Engineer AIT is anyone's guess.

At the age of 17 I joined the Army, not completing high school as I was eager to go and shipped out June 30, 1970. I had lots of buddies who had joined the previous years that were a few years older than me. My father served for 22 years and retired as a SFC E-7. He served WWII, Korea, and Vietnam. He was with the 5th Special Forces Group at Ft. Bragg, N.C. when he retired. His tour of duty in Vietnam was with the Special Forces.

Growing up an army brat, and having a father like him, all five of us kids learned how to make a bed and bounce a coin off it. We had strict rules, and all had their assigned chores and duties. And there was no talking back.

My father went with me to the recruitment office located at that time in Pomona, Ca. He told the Recruiter to sign me up for Airborne - Infantry and Vietnam. I was 17 and figured he knew best.

I reported to Ft. Ord in the summer of 70 and my main goal was to make my father proud and just get through all this training. I was promoted to E-2 out of Basic and onto my next Infantry AIT training, but wait, somehow when I got off the bus, I was in Ft. Leonard Wood, MI?

I do not recall what happened, or how I even had orders for this assignment as when the Drill Sergeant started yelling, all I did was jump in formation and shut up. At 17 I had thought, ok, this is part of the Infantry AIT. The Drill Sergeants just told me to report to a certain barrack and assigned me to a squad and thus began the Combat Engineer training. I arrived there around Sept of 70 and just remember it was the beginning to get cold, real cold. The training was tough, but I always like a good challenge and I do remember freezing my butt off while there. I was promoted to E-3 after graduating Combat Engineer AIT.

So, they start calling off names and those that were called had orders to head to nam. I was still 17 so I was passed over and I still had to complete my Airborne Jump School. So Off I went to Ft. Benning, Ga and completed my jump school training and got my wings. (Side note - about 25 years later my father was hanging up my jump wings certificate alongside his and to our amazement we both got our wings on the same date on Dec 11th but 22 years apart. We could not have planned that)

Well now I was shipped off with orders to Ft, Bragg, NC. I reported to the company on my orders. A co, 2nd Battalion 325 Airborne Infantry. When I walked into the First Sergeant office and handed him my orders, he looked at them and then up at me and screamed "What the hell is a combat engineer doing being assigned to my company?" Again, I had no response but to say, "reporting as ordered!" He shook his head and mumbled a few profanities and then told me to report to 3rd platoon. So here I was assigned to an infantry unit with Combat Engineer Training. I was promoted to E-5 June of 1972 with a waiver. It was not until 1977 that I was finally assigned to a Combat Engineer Battalion. 13th Engineer Battalion at Ft. Ord. The reassigned to the 518th Engineer Battalion in Panama.

So, all in all it was quite a ride and met a lot of good buddies and memories. Somehow, I had missed Vietnam but unfortunately my buddies who had joined before me were KIA in nam. Oh, and I did finish my GED and then found out about a program that awarded all the guys who left high school to join, a diploma awarded by the County I resided in, along with a big ceremony too. It was called " Operation Recognition Veterans Diploma Project" So look this up if you left high school and get your diploma.

So, I guess the moral of this assignment is no matter what you think you are going to get, the army has different plans for you. Ha
